It may be remembered that during the scandals of the Haute Cour it was stated by his former tutor, Foucault de Mondion, that the bulk of the General's books and lectures and repecially his magning oper, "The Chinese, Painted by One of Them, " had been entirely written by him, and that the General had only signed the title page, an accusation which Tcheng-Ki-Tong indignantly denies. Be that as it may, the Charge d'Affaires is clearly a very intelligent and most well-read and admits the knowledge of fourteen out of the two hundred dialects of his native land. He makes a point of reading two hours every night, and no matter at what time he goes to bed in always gives up two hours of his sleep to increasing his store of knowledge. I had a long conversation with him on the might of the dinner. He was very much interested about Nellie Bly, and said that he should write about it in his next letter to his Imperial master. It may be mentioned en possone that Nellie's tour was the topic of the evening, and that your correspondent had all his time taken up in giving particulars about the four as well as about the now I smous interview between her and Jules Verne. It is difficult to remember any bit of newspaper enterprise that has created so much interest, and the main reason of this interest is that the chief actor is a young and charming girl. Teheng-Ki-Tong couldn't be got to speak much about the World's Fair. He said, however, that there was no doubt that China would take part as soon as it was officially brought before her. He confirmed the remark of his colleague and said that there could be no question as to the superiority of the claims of New York as the location of a international Exhibition. The General, next to literature, takes most interest in things gastronomical, and most of his ancedetes, of which he has an immense stock, are about eating and drinking. He says that the cheavest place to live in is Foo-Chow, where he was brought up as a cadet in the Imperial service. Here he, in common with the other cadets, received an allowance of 10 cents per diem for rations from the Government, and with these 10 cents be was able to have three meals a day with eight courses at each meal. One of his stories is that being once on board ship outside Son Tay, he gave the steward a Mexican dollar and told him to get him a chicken for it and cook it in the Chinese fashion. About an hour after the steward returned followed As Exolish Periodical referring to Lord

Some capital out of a remark made by me. A Badly Tainted Judge.

(From the Rocketer Democrat.)

The New York Bar Association has moved with masterly slowness in taking cognizance of Judge Bookstaver's official councetion with the Flack divorce case, but at last is has felt the impulse of public sentiment, and a committee has been appointed to investigate the matter and report. It seems more than probable that the ultimate result of the processing will be the impactance of a remark made by me. permit me to say that I have never had but one opinion as to the proper location for the proposed Fair. Neither have I seem or head way in the seem or head way in the seem of part of any other location than New York, except such as were inspired by and any claims for any other location than New York as were inspired by and founded on local interests. And further, I am now and always have been ready to do all within my power to assist in this settle ment of the question of locality that never ought to have been raised.

A Jerseyman's Mensurement.

Jules Verne told me before he left Amiens that he should take the liberty on some fumost extraordinary young person that he had ever seen. "She looks like a watchspring," he said. He was evidently delighted with the young woman, and as for Mrs. Verne, she is still speaking of her, so at least Verne wrote your correspondent a day or two ago.

In Paris this season, in the good houses at least, there is to be no music played during Is there any one duly authorized to keep dinner parties, and this is an excellent the l'ost-Office Building in this city reasons thing.
